New chicken game sweeps Europe!

Spanish motorists are gambling fortunes and lives on a death-defying game called Madmen at the Wheel!

The object is to speed down the wrong side of a highway for miles on end without getting killed.

Horrifyingly, players who meet oncoming traffic are not allowed to turn their steering wheels!

Road warriors race down wrong side of highway

"It's totally insane," police Lt. Lorenzo Soler told reporters in Madrid. "It's impossible to say how many motorists are involved in the game but our best guess is about 50.

"These aren't kids," he added. "The stakes often go as high as $20,000 a game. Since they started playing three months ago four players have been injured. One innocent motorist was killed."

Just how the game originated isn't clear. Cops do know that most players are drunk out of their minds or sky-high on cocaine.

They drive everything from mini-cars to massive 18-wheelers. The average wrong-side run is 10 miles. And speeds are limited only by the power of their machines.

Matias Ballarin claims to have run four races with death before he got smart.

The 27-year-old credited his wife with bringing him to his senses before he killed someone or got killed himself. "The game is incredibly addictive," he told reporters. "The speed, danger and sheer exhilaration of risking lives keeps most players coming back for more.

"If I didn't have a wife who loves me I'd still be doing it myself.

"I don't know how many innocent people I ran off the road. If it hadn't been for their quick reactions, I'd be facing a murder rap or be a statistic myself."

The Madrid police have boosted road patrols in a bid to prevent more blood from being shed.

"Frankly there's only so much we can do," said Lt. Soler. "Our best hope is that these maniacs will see how crazy this is and stop."

LION ATTACK VICTIM Roxanne Hernandez has undergone five operations

After being mauled by 300-pound lion . . .

Wig working wonders for stricken girl

A wig and a world of love are helping courageous little Roxanne Hernandez battle back from the terrifying injuries she suffered last fall when she went shopping with her mom — and was mauled by a 300-pound lion.

The startling beast attacked 5-year-old Roxanne as the girl walked through a Houston, Texas flea market, tearing her skull open all the way to the brain.

The tragic child has already undergone five operations to repair the damage and she faces up to five more agonizing months of surgery.

But she's been showered by a shower of gifts and an outpouring of love from friends and strangers alike. And she celebrated a milestone on her recovery the day she received a picture of Roxanne taken before the attack on a model.

"This is the best present of all," said her grateful dad Joel.

Jailers vowed to tighten security after a crafty inmate picked the lock on his cell, walked to the women's section and had sex with a woman — twice!

Husband makes shocking claim in divorce suit . . .

My wife used her good looks to swindle seniors

Nicholas Milano says his willowy wife Jeannyne threw him out of the house and then went to work — bilking oldsters out of their money in exchange for romance.

His accusations are denied by Jeannyne, 27, in a divorce trial that is making headlines in Mineola, N.Y. But a nurse who tended Jeannyne following an accident backed up the husband's allegations in court testimony.

"She was a dutiful wife who performed all of the marital duties in keeping with morals and ethics," insisted an attorney for redheaded Jeannyne, who countered with charges that her husband used drugs.

Milano, 41, took his wife of seven years to court demanding a divorce and insisting that he should not have to pay alimony or part with any possessions. He called as witness a nurse hired to tend his wife in their Levittown, N.Y., home who said she saw Jeannyne entertain elderly lovers.

"It's our allegations that the wife was entertaining men in their 60s and 70s," Milano's attorney, Dominic Barbara, told The NEWS. "Her nurse, Rosemarie Angalet, said she had sexual relations with these men.

"One man signed over the deed to a house worth $114,000. She got half of the proceeds when the old man sold his house. We have a copy of the check to prove it."

In days of sizzling testimony, lawyer Barbara and the nurse contended that Jeannyne was wooing at least five old men, all retired and living on pensions or savings.

"She started having sex with the five men," Barbara said. "One of them was 81. She had sexy outfits to use for her little business at home.

"Her game is dating old men and taking their money. She'd get them to sell their houses."

Nurse Angalet, who cared for Jeannyne from April 14 to July 30 while she recovered from a neck injury, told reporters that on July 30 during the closing of the sale of a house belonging to Edward Brehmer, 81, Jeannyne got a check for $57,120. The nurse said that after she got the check, Jeannyne wouldn't let the old man into her car.

"Told the old b— to walk," the nurse quoted Jeannyne as saying. And the old man did walk, she said.

"That man would do anything she told him to do," Miss Angalet said. The Milanos are planning to return to court soon to continue their divorce battle, and Jeannyne's attorney George Ike Jr. is determined to prove his client innocent of the sexual allegations. "She never entertained elderly gentlemen for sex or for their money," Rosenbaum told The NEWS.

RAVISHING REDHEAD Jeannyne Milano is determined to prove she's innocent, says her lawyer.

KITCHEN HORROR

Kids broiled in microwave

Health officials have been alerted to a horrifying new form of child abuse — the roasting of babies in microwave ovens!

At least two such incidents have been reported in as many months and as the popularity of microwaves increases, experts fear they may become more common.

"We never dreamed it could happen," said Shirley Goodwin, general secretary of Britain's Health Visitors Association, which sounded a global alert to the problem.

"It is important for doctors to have it in the back of their minds when examining children with inexplicable burns," she said.

Stork makes surprise visit on dad's birthday!

Delighted Debbie Andrus gave her husband a wonderful present for his birthday — a surprise baby neither of them knew they were expecting!

The Wheaton, Md., mom gave birth in her bathroom after suffering from what she thought was indigestion. Now she's cuddling a healthy son named Christopher as proud pop Keith Andrus decorates the nursery.

"There were no signs that I was pregnant," Debbie, 28, told The NEWS. "I gained weight, but I gain weight a lot and then take it off again. I wore the same size clothes the whole time."

Debbie never had a clue that she was expecting a bundle of joy, even when she began to suffer stomach pains. She was thought she'd eaten too much or was coming down with the flu.

Then, in the middle of the night, the stomach cramps became severe.

"I didn't know what it was," Debbie recalled. "I woke up at 4 a.m. with the pains and went into the bathroom, pushed just once and the baby was born."

Debbie and baby Christopher were rushed to a hospital where both checked out just fine. The bundle of joy weighed only 4 pounds, 10 ounces, but he was healthy and active.

"We weren't trying to have a child but we're delighted," Debbie said. "It was Keith's birthday present."

Slinky sweeties slammed in Soviet survey

9 out of 10 Russian men prefer this hefty housewife to this dazzling model!

BEEFY BABES are huge with guys in the Soviet Union, reveals an eye-opening new survey.

SLENDER high-fashion models like this one "couldn't survive a Soviet winter," say Russian men. And lucky ladies do better in factories! "The best thing about her are those boots," said one Moscow resident who participated in the survey.

Mikhail Gorbachev and his boutique-crazed wife Raisa have gone all out to improve the lot of the Soviet people but it doesn't look like they'll ever be able to change the average Russian male's taste in women.

An incredible 97% of 1,000 men surveyed by a major East German news agency said they preferred the fat woman (right) to the slinky model (left) because the model couldn't survive a Soviet winter or a shift in one of their factories!

"It's one thing to be practical but this just doesn't make any sense at all," said Dr. Dieter Frumt, a French sexologist who assisted in the survey. "It just goes to show that a Russian is still a Russian no matter how much technology and affluence they have. Universally they have admired obesity and ugliness as signs of strength.

"If this survey truly embraces how the majority feels about beauty and women then nothing has changed at all."

In fact, there is little doubt that the survey truly does reveal the Soviet male's taste in women.

One participant, Nikolai Egorov, called the model "a frail butterfly — pretty to look at but worthless."

Boris Pokhanov, also polled, said the model "would freeze to death on the first day of winter and she has no muscle for work.

"She's too skinny, that one."

THE KREMLIN'S FASHION CZARINA Raisa Gorbachev was horrified by the study's conclusions about men.

America being bled to death by workers who fake illness

By JEROME LASSITER

Businesses are getting ripped off to the tune of a mind-boggling $150 billion a year by employees who fake sickness, take extra-long lunches and coffee breaks and are late to work.

These goof-offs cost U.S. companies three times as much as the annual loss from merchandise theft, according to a study released yesterday.

"Those who are prone to conduct this kind of behavior on the job are individuals who tend to feel that it's normal," said Ryan Kuhn, of Reid Psychological Systems.

"They also feel that individuals who engage in this sort of behavior shouldn't be isolated or selectively disciplined," Kuhn said.

Experts believe that people who engage in faking illness are also more likely to steal.

Boy, 5, takes sis for a little spin in mom's car

Hot-rodder tyke is in hot water

Hot roddin' Rocco Morabito Jr., 5, made headlines when he swiped his mom's car and went for a ride with his baby sister.

By SUSAN JAMISON

Now he's making amends by giving up TV and the use of his tape recorder.

The Port Chester, N.Y., tyke stashed his mom's car keys several weeks ago, backed the family station wagon down a 80-foot driveway, and drove through rush hour traffic like a veteran cabbie.

He was heading for the beach — but he wound up in the police station.

His mother, Susan Morabito, swears he'll never drive again — until he's old enough to get a license.

"He didn't think he'd done anything wrong," Susan told The NEWS. "Now he knows. Everybody was impressed by what he did except for me — I was sick!"

Susan says she was sleeping soundly on the morning of December 6 when cops awakened her. They asked her if she had two kids — a boy named Rocco and a 2-year-old named Brandi.

"I ran to check their bedroom and they weren't there," Susan recalled. "It was about 8 a.m. I was screaming and panicking, yelling, 'Where are my kids?'"

It turned out the two tots were in safe hands, sealing their bonds in the slammer. An alert traffic cop had spotted them as they weaved at 25 m.p.h. through several intersections packed with morning rush hour traffic.

"The police said they were crying," Susan said. "They told the police they wanted their mother after realizing they'd done something wrong."

Rocco confessed that he had taken the car keys from his mom's purse on top of the refrigerator and invited his sister for a spin.

He didn't have any idea it was against the law for little boys to drive.

THIS IS HOW I did it: Little Rocco Morabito Jr. shows the driving technique he used on his early morning spin through busy city streets at the wheel of his mother's station wagon.

He backed out of the garage, drove down this street — and headed for the beach

Kid wins battle with cancer

Happy Alan "Kojak" Smith, 13, gets a giant hug to celebrate his triumph over the brain cancer doctors thought he would never survive.

Five years ago, Alan was operated on for a brain tumor so large it had actually split his skull. Now, he's up and around — and even plays baseball.

And after five years of weary and painful treatments, specialists are confident the courageous Walton, Ala., boy is cured and will lead a normal life.

As his friends and family gathered around a cake proclaiming "Miracles Still Happen," Alan got a congratulatory hug from Reggie Hedges, head of the outpatient clinic where the boy came for regular treatments.

Double vision beats DWI rap

Brian Bowers beat a drunk driving rap — because a cop couldn't tell him from his identical twin.

"Defendants have been doing this to me for 25 years," said Olathe, Kans., Judge Earle D. Jones. "And that's the first time it worked."

Bowers, 21, was arrested by Highway Patrol Sgt. Robert Sharp.

The prosecution alleged he had a blood alcohol content of .13 percent.

Bowers and his identical twin brother who have matching beards were gray suits to court.

"When I saw them walk in, I knew it was obviously a trick, and that's what it was," said Sharp.

A judge had found Bowers guilty of the charge in August.

He appealed the ruling and appeared before Judge Jones in February.

Since the real Sharp arrested in August didn't have a driver's license, the case hinged on Sharp's identification of the driver.

Cops: Gal fried boyfriend

A 34-year-old man was hospitalized with burns over 20 percent of his body after his girlfriend poured boiling grease on his face, chest and arms, cops say.

Lavonia Singleton, 41, apparently hadn't forgiven Larry Bonner for a fight they had earlier, police in Tampa, Fla., said.

She was charged with aggravated battery, they said.

Cops track down prisoner who escaped in 1970

Back in the slammer!

By DICK DONOVAN

For 17 trouble-free years Rebecca Billips worked as a highly respected secretary. Today, she's in a Pennsylvania prison — the same one she busted out of in 1970!

Law-abiding gal was a model citizen for 17 years after she busted out of jail

For almost two decades, under the alias of Cecilia Marks, she lived a model life, though always with the fear that someday a knock would come at her door and she'd be on her way back to prison.

The dreaded knock came last July. It was a cop armed with a faded mug shot and a warrant for her arrest as a fugitive from the Pennsylvania Correctional Institution in Muncy.

The dark secret of her past came to light in a routine background and fingerprint check by a New York bank where Cecilia had applied for a job.

Now 46, she's back in the Muncy prison where she escaped in 1970 after serving three years of a 10-year sentence for forging $1,700 in checks while from a Philadelphia insurance company where she had been a $70 a week secretary.

After her escape — it was her third attempt — she worked for a time in Philadelphia before moving on to New York with a new name.

There she worked at several secretarial jobs and her employers gave her nothing but high marks and praise.

"She was the type that when you gave her a job you didn't have to worry about getting it done," said the president of a store-importing firm.

For 17 years, Rebecca Billips alias Cecilia Marks was a law-abiding citizen. She survived any kind of social life and avoided police — until she applied for a bank job through an agency that required a fingerprint check.

She had been fingerprinted for jobs before but apparently they had not been checked. This time, however, they were and it brought her life as a fugitive to an end.

Now back in the Muncy prison, she's awaiting trial on her escape. But she's hoping her 17 years as a model citizen will earn her leniency from the state Board of Probation and Parole. She's appealed to Gov. Robert P. Casey for a pardon.

"It's driving me crazy," she said. "People can't really know that I'm not going to do any more sleeping. But I really proved myself for 17 years."

Footloose

The foot dangling beneath van driver Charlie Strain belong to his partner Dusty Simon. The two men were making sure their vehicle cleared a drawbridge at a bank in Cocoa, Fla.

A Californian woman has been freed after spending five days stuck between her bed and dresser.

Alameda fire fighters rescued the 56-year-old woman after she apparently slipped off the bed and couldn't get up.

Squabble over lottery ticket shatters clan

The Dureault family hit the jackpot in the lottery, but wealth hasn't brought them happiness. They're at each other's throats squabbling over the money.

Ernest Dureault, 54, says the winning ticket was his, but his son Bruce says the ticket was bought by his wife, Dureault's daughter-in-law.

The family went to court over the matter and a jury awarded Dureault, of Lowell, Mass., the proceeds of the disputed ticket. Now the family is in an uproar.

"My wife bought that ticket with her money," fumed Bruce Dureault in an interview with The News. "Winning the lottery was a dream of a lifetime. Now it's a nightmare. It's an injustice that my father should end up with the money."

A lawyer for the old man says his client handed $5 to his daughter-in-law and asked her to buy him five lottery tickets. When he won, he says, his son and daughter-in-law convinced him to let them collect for them.

COURT BATTLE WINNER Ernest Dureault says he paid for the winning ticket

He says they told him he'd lose his Social Security benefits and might have to give half his winnings to his estranged wife," said the attorney, Nicholas Mavrogenes of Lowell. "They convinced him to let them cash it and hold it for him, he says. He was so grateful he told them to pay their bills with the money first. Then give him the remainder."

Dureault said his son never gave him the lottery money and insists that he was entitled to it. So he contacted an attorney and went to court over the winnings.

But Bruce Dureault swears his father's version of events is something he cooked up while in the throes of alcoholism, a disease for which he gets disability benefits.

Man wins lawsuit and jackpot — but loses his family

EVE CAME FIRST, SAYS SCIENTIST

A controversial new theory suggests that the first human on Earth was a woman! Anthropologist Alan R. Wann reached that shocking conclusion based on the study of genetic material called MDNA, which is carried by females only.

Studies of the material further indicate that the first humans appeared on Earth only 100,000 years ago, not millions of years as most scientists believe, the University of Pennsylvania expert said.

Legless boy somersaults 2 miles — to save his dad

Legless Tito Gatti somersaulted two miles to get help for his injured dad!

"There's no doubt it. Tito saved my life," Adriano Gatti, 38, told reporters in Piacenza, Italy. "Some boys his age couldn't have run two miles to get help.

"But my son is a hero. He called that far on the ground."

The bizarre drama unfolded when Gatti and his 7-year-old son set out to do some chores on their sprawling 300-acre farm, said newspapers.

The boy, who lost both legs above the knee in an auto accident two years ago, was sitting in the back of a pickup truck when the tree his dad was chopping fell the wrong way, pinning him to the ground.

"Blood was coming out of daddy's ears and mouth and he couldn't hear anything I was saying," said the boy. "I knew I had to get somebody to help him!

"But I don't know how to drive the truck. My metal legs were at home. And the ground was so wet my crutches sank in the ground.

"At first I was so scared I just sat there crying. Then a voice in my head said 'Somersault, somersault.' So I almost myself toward the nearest road and did."

The rocky, wooded terrain made the going painful and slow. But the courageous boy refused to give up — and arrived at the narrow but well-traveled dirt road that runs near his family's farm within two hours.

An unidentified tourist stopped when he spotted the boy's frantic waving. Together they drove into town and alerted police, who dispatched officers and an ambulance to the farm.

Gatti was hospitalized with a collapsed lung and six broken ribs but should recover quickly, said doctors.

The injured man himself said the experience has made him "a new man."

"For a long time I felt sorry for myself and my son because of his handicap," said Gatti.

"With his courage he has shown me that legs aren't everything.

"Even without them he is a man."

Sisters wait 75 years — for this kiss

Wheelchair-bound sisters Rose Arcobe, left, and Assunta Caligiuri kissed and embraced at a Seattle airport after being reunited — for the first time in 75 years. "This must be a miracle," said Rose, 96. She and Assunta, now 83, were separated three-quarters of a century ago when their father and Assunta left the United States and returned to Italy. Rose was married and Argentina, and the sisters eventually lost touch of each other. Friends from Rose's retirement home helped her find her sister and raised funds to pay for the reunion.

'Miami Vice' dandy Don Johnson is not just a pretty face

I'M A MAN'S MAN!

TV super hunk Don Johnson may dress like a dandy and have a pretty face — but he says he's no wimp.

After years of struggling in Tinseltown, Don rocketed to fame as the fashion plate Sonny Crockett on flashy Miami Vice. He became famous as much for his silk suits, pastel T-shirts and Italian loafers as for his crime-fighting on the fast-paced adventure series.

But Don says there's a lot more to him than his pretty face, dandy wardrobe and playboy image. In fact, he believes that much of his success is due to the fact that men identify with him. And that's because of his wild and rugged past as a young hellion growing up in rural Missouri.

"I think men recognize in me that I'm a man's man — that I have some scars to prove it, and I think women see the same thing," said the toughest star.

"They see a guy who has been around the block a couple of times and still hasn't lost his ability to be vulnerable or lost his sense of humor."

Don's also known as a wild party guy who liked booze, broads and drugs. And his shocking reputation with the ladies was enhanced by his romance with sexy actress Melanie Griffith when she was 14 and he was in his 20s.

But Don says he's given up his partying and womanizing since the birth of his son Jesse.

"I have sort of substituted that need with my love for my son and I like that," he said. "I'm a family man now."

Don's also a devoted husband to his wife Patti D'Arbanville, whom he married in 1985. And he's very proud of his marriage.

"I've been married to the same woman for a long time, and I've been married to a woman who's been very successful in her own right," he said. "I've been married to a woman who's been very beautiful, and I've been married to a woman who's been very intelligent. And I've been married to a woman who's been very sexy. And I've been married to a woman who's been very loving. And I've been married to a woman who's been very supportive. And I've been married to a woman who's been very understanding. Anti-smoking group blamed after . . .

Exploding cigar blows off man's head

By HENRY WEBER

Police suspect an anti-smoking group planted the exploding cigar that was so powerful it blew off a man's head.

"We've had at least 14 similar incidents and injuries but this is the first death," Police Sgt. Claudio Mendes told reporters in Vitoria, Brazil.

"It's certainly no joke," he added. "Our experts say the powder charge in that cigar was big enough to have taken down a wall."

The bewildering drama unfolded, ironically enough, at table 13 in Borges's, one of the finest restaurants in Vitoria, said newspapers.

Georges Preston, 58, had just finished a meal with his wife and two friends when a middle-aged woman approached the table and offered him a large, gift-wrapped cigar.

"Georges smoked the cigars of his own before dinner and there were so many complaints that we thought the woman was sent by the management to apologize," said Laura Preston, the man's grieving widow.

"He sniffed the cigar and then bit off the end.

"He lit it with a wooden match and took two or three puffs.

"Then it went off — bang!"

The deafening explosion was so strong that it literally ripped the restaurant said witnesses. Preston's wife and friends suffered only minor injuries.

Authorities said the blast actually vaporized Preston's head.

"There was nothing left from the neck up," said Sgt. Mendes.

Policemen in turned plans from his dinner party when the bombed cigar went off.

"Whoever [illegible] must have been hurt or killed, too."

Suspected in the man's death is the small but militant anti-smoking group, Stop Smokers Now!

The group has claimed responsibility in the fire-bombings of several tobacco shops in the past six months.

Police think attacks on individuals like Preston are next logical step in the group's war against smoking in public.

"SSN is an underground group and extremely objective," said Sgt. Mendes. "But I promise you we will stop them before another innocent smoker is killed."

"Georges hated his cigars and called anyone anytime who tried to stop him from smoking. I wonder what he's saying now?" Mrs. Preston said.

Miracle rosaries turn to gold, say parishioners

Parishioners at a small church proclaimed it a miracle when they returned from a holy pilgrimage — and their rosaries mysteriously turned from silver to gold.

Blessed beads were obtained on pilgrimage to Europe

Several members of St. Barnabas Roman Catholic Church in Portsmouth, R.I., bought the rosaries during a visit to Medjugorje, Yugoslavia.

The metal links on William Ward's rosary have taken on a wondrous golden glow since he returned from Medjugorje, where several sightings of the Virgin Mary have been reported through the years.

When Sister Mary Margaret touched her rosary to a similar one in the church choir, the crucifix turned from a dull silver to bright gold. She has had the rosary for 45 years.

Other nuns toured Sister Mary Margaret about her incredible story until they touched their rosaries to hers with the same magical result.

Church member Kate Thibault found a blue rosary as an old story about eight years ago. The links between the beads have now turned gold.

PARISHIONER Mary Lopez, 91, holds one of the rosaries that most members of a small Rhode Island Catholic church believe have miraculously turned to gold.

"We believe we are witnessing a miracle," said the church's pastor, Father Thomas Hart. "It has done a lot — spiritually — for the people of our parish.

"The Lord works in mysterious ways. This year has been proclaimed the Marian Year when we call attention to the Virgin Mary and ask for increased devotion to her. And because this has happened

Be Your Own Boss

Three Businesses You Can Start Part-Time For Under $2000

No prior experience necessary...just the desire to be your own boss and the will to make a lot of money!

If you want the better things in life, these businesses can make your dreams come true.

by Jeff Matthews

Here are three proven businesses that are easy to start and run by yourself. No special training or prior experience is required and best of all, they can be started in your spare time for under $2000.

From the very first day you can make an extra $200 to $250 a day, working just a few nights a week, or on weekends. This can easily add up to $20,000 and more a year.

1. Carpet Cleaning

A few weekend hours can put an extra [redacted] every week into your bank account!

Carpet cleaning has become one of the largest service businesses in the world. It is highly-profitable and surprisingly easy for small businesses to compete successfully against impersonal larger companies. Every home and office has rugs and carpet that must be cleaned regularly. Most cleaning is done "on premises" providing a sound opportunity for men and women willing to work at developing a successful business.

The Von Schrader VS1 Dry Foam Carpet Extraction System cleans deep and completely in a single step. Because it uses dry foam, carpet dries the same day. It's the only foam machine that cleans and vacuums carpet in one pass! It is built to high standards of quality and has proven its dependability and outstanding performance in years of steady use. Its simplicity of design and operation (plus being lightweight) permits anyone to do on location cleaning quickly and easily — and with professional results.

2. Upholstery Cleaning

Earn $30-$40 an hour in your spare time cleaning sofas and chairs

It's a proven fact that gritty, greasy dirt can't be removed from upholstery by vacuuming or brushing. Furniture must be cleaned scientifically, not superficially. The Von Schrader VS2 Upholstery Extraction System is unique in its ability to clean deep down. Years of research went into its development. The result is an amazingly effective and uncomplicated machine that will safely clean all fabrics. It is compact and lightweight for easy transporting in your car.

The market for upholstery cleaning is large, but unlike many other business opportunities, it has very little competition. It costs less to get started in this business than most others. One can start cleaning upholstery with the Von Schrader VS2 Upholstery Extraction System as a source for expanding into carpet cleaning; or you might prefer to start right off with both the Carpet and Upholstery Systems, as many other successful Associates have done.

3. Ceiling and Wall Washing

Clean 2 average rooms in an evening, earn $60

The Von Schrader VS3 Power Wall Cleaning System washes walls and ceilings of all types: painted, marble, washable wallpaper, cinder block, cement block, rough painted brick and more. And the Von Schrader System leaves ceilings and walls clean and sparkling. Painted walls retain their original beauty for years longer. Customers appreciate this service because it saves them the need for re-painting or re-papering. It is 5 times faster than tedious bucket-and-sponge washing. And definitely easier! One person can clean up to 5,000 square feet in one eight-hour day with material costs of less than 50 cents. No wonder Associates report such high profits. The Von Schrader VS3 Power Wall Cleaning System is compact and lightweight. Fits easily in any size car.

The choice of a life-time to earn big money!

No matter which of these 3 businesses you are interested in, Von Schrader will provide you with all the help you will ever need. You get complete supplies and accessories with each machine plus a wealth of promotional aids including an easy-to-use, easy-to-follow instruction manual, advertising circulars, suggested sales letters and one of the most informative business manuals available. The manual tells you in detail how to get customers, how to estimate and quote jobs and many other helpful aids to help you make your new business profitable from your first day.

Von Schrader has no franchise or start-up fees, and you can even use your Visa or MasterCard to pay for your business in small monthly payments. You may even be able to profit from several jobs before you're even billed for your first payment and all future payments could easily come out of profits. I've never seen a safer, easier way to earn extra cash quickly and at the same time build a secure lifetime business of one's own.

If you'd like to learn more, simply write to the Von Schrader Company, Dept. 89018, 1666 Junction Avenue in Racine, Wisconsin 53403. Easier yet, you can phone them toll free at 1-800-558-2484. Please ask for Operator 89018. Either way, the information is absolutely free and puts you under no

TOT BURNS DOWN HOUSE

By JOE BERGER

Downtrodden father Tommy Thompson and his family have been dead broke and homeless for nearly a month now because his impish son Sean sent a note to Santa — and burned their house to the ground!

Impressed Sean, 3, decided the best way to get St. Nick's attention was to write a message up the chimney.

So he climbed on a chair and threw the note in the middle of the night — and it landed on a hot log — and soon the family was rudely awakened with billowing clouds of smoke pouring into the house.

Tommy, 31, stumbled back up the chimney to get Sean and their family escaped unharmed.

But their home — a rented, two-bedroom bungalow on Los Angeles' Mt. Vernon Avenue — was destroyed.

Neighbors and Red Cross workers quickly collected clothes and furniture for the family, which includes Sean's brother Tommy, Jr., 4, and sister Debbie, 2.

Tommy, a laborer, is unemployed and his wife Sharon is disabled.

Sean's note was never found.

"He was trying to send a note to Santa — up the chimney!" said Tommy.

"He was always talking about Santa coming down the chimney. He was real happy. He thought he was going to get what he wanted."

Sean's wish was granted. Tommy said: "We're getting a lot of help from people. We're going to get back on our feet."

SAD Sean tore his note into the fire. "He was always rushing to the fireplace to clean up the chimney," said his dad Tom. "He was just being a boy."

Veggies fight killer cancer, says new study

A new study confirms that eating vegetables can prevent cancer — even in smokers — and most Americans aren't getting this lifesaving shield.

Scientists at Tufts University say that beta-carotene — found in yellow vegetables, fruits and leafy green vegetables — is one of the best cancer fighting substances around. But most folks don't eat enough fruits and vegetables to significantly reduce the risk of cancer.

"Americans don't eat in the right pattern," said Dr. Paul Lachance, a professor of food science at Rutgers University. "The plate that's two-thirds meat and potato and non-dairy green or yellow vegetable should be two-thirds vegetable."

Judge fines himself $1 for being late

A judge who was late for his own court found himself in contempt — and paid a $1 fine!

Circuit Judge Robert P. Lang had performed only one of the 15 marriages scheduled for 10 a.m. when he realized he had a meeting of school board members waiting. Lang, who was presiding over a divorce case, ordered himself to pay $1 for being late.

"I don't want anyone to come to court late," said Judge Lang, admonishing both officials and spectators.

The judge ordered his clerk to deduct the $1 fine from his salary. Lang's colleagues on the bench voted to pay the fine into the county's general fund.

Zoo-loving leopard spots a good deal!

This gentle leopard named Xiang is delighted to be back in a Canterbury, England, zoo — after finding life in the human jungle a bit too terrifying.

The big cat, shown cuddling with keeper Nick Mars, escaped from the friendly confines of the zoo when a storm blew a tree main his cage and let him free.

For seven days he roamed the countryside and woke residents were warned to leave their homes. But Xiang was having a splendid time himself, surviving by killing rabbits, rodents and birds.

And finally the kingsize kitty hungry and bedraggled gave himself up. He returned to the zoo gates, walked into a cage trap baited with a dead chicken, gobbled up the feast — then curled up and waited for keepers to come get him.

"There was never any danger to the public," said a zoo spokesman. "Xiang is a shy, nocturnal animal."

HOME AGAIN: Xiang gives keeper Nick Mars a hug after returning to the zoo.

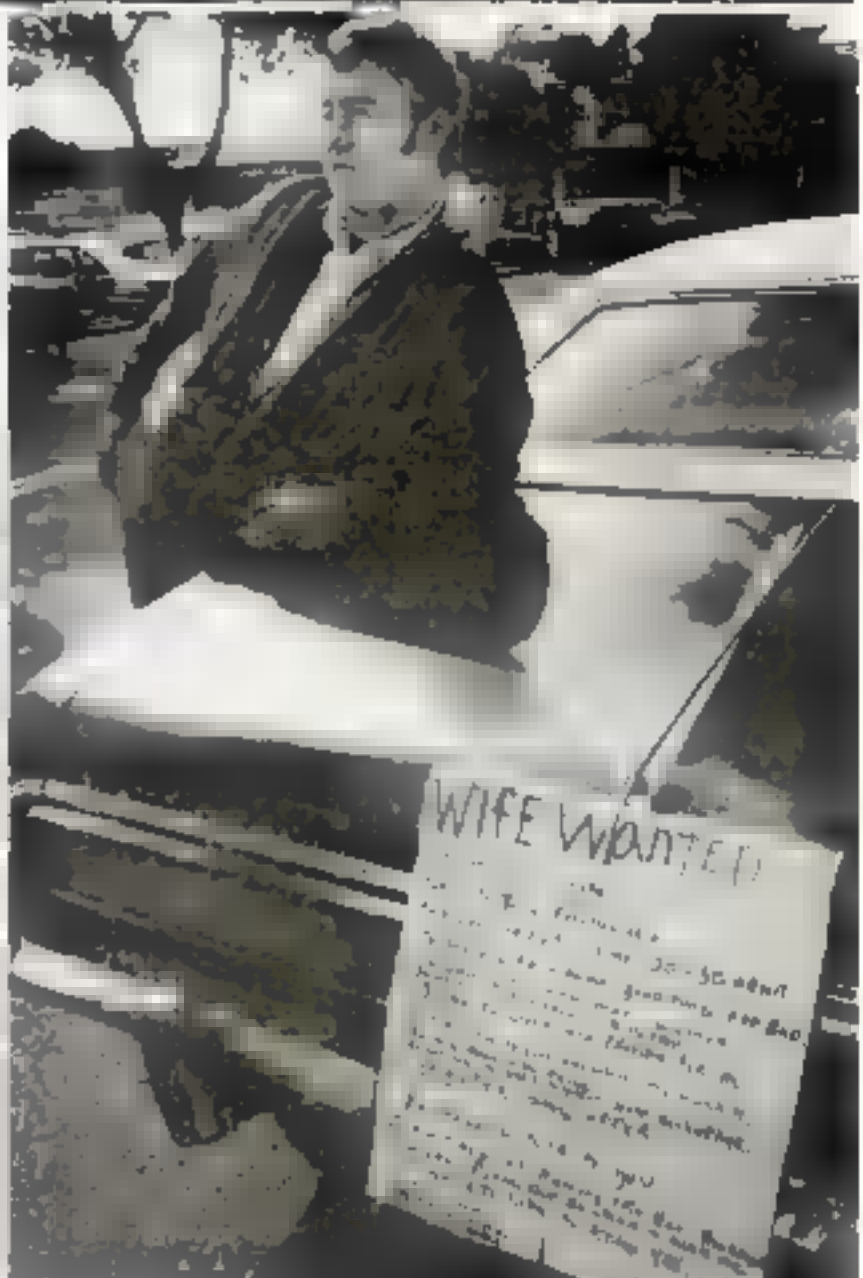
Lonely bachelor's vi[illegible] a [illegible] center parking lot

I want a wife!



Lonely oil field worker Randy Keser wants to marry some lucky gal and settle down — which is why he's advertising for a wife in the parking lot at K-mart.

The Ventura, Calif., bachelor has taped a touching sign to the back of his car, hoping that the woman of his dreams might read about his quest for a bride and apply for the position.

By SUSAN JOHNSON

"Wife Wanted," says the hand-lettered white cardboard sign. "Or live-together mate. For Life Time Relationship. Employed or not. Age 20-30 about."

Keser, 38, says he hasn't gotten many offers since he started hunting for a bride several weeks ago, but he remains optimistic. After all, he's not using that picky.

"I'm just looking for somebody average, just an everyday girl," he said. "I'm not a pervert or anything.

"I just want someone to spend my life with. I'll get really happy by myself."

Keser, a divorced man who stands 6 feet tall, lost his wife 3 years ago after reportedly breaking up with his fiancee of nine year. But his unlucky love life has not hardened his heart in the opposite way. In fact, he says, he can be damned romantic when he wants to.

"Say you go to a restaurant with me," he said. "I'd be that type of person who would pull out a rose and hand it to you.

"Some girls have come by and said that I'm a male chauvinist pig. But I don't know what that is. I'm sure the woman who snatches this ad up is a lot like me."

Trouble is, so far Keser has not had applicants by the job of prospective mate and life's companion. He's not bad looking in a chunky kind of way so it must be the note that keeps gals from lining up to date him. Still, the wife-hunter remains optimistic that pretty soon someone will read his sign and take him up on his offer.

Mommy, remember the little [illegible] with no name [illegible]...

ADOPTIVE DAD Frank Kaas holds little David as he lay in a snapshot taken shortly after the boy was adopted.

Bighearted couple show doomed tot meaning of love

By DICK DONOVAN

From the very moment he came into the world Baby John Doe never had the slightest chance at a normal life!

But before God called the tiny tyke home, he brought a very special love into the lives of two very special people.

The nameless baby was given up by his mother at birth for adoption by a young Tampa, Fla., couple who wanted to take him as their own.

But before the adoption papers could be signed, the infant was plunged into a desperate struggle for life. He was hooked up to life-support machines, then underwent a battery of tests.

The tests finally revealed the awful truth. It was discovered that in the place where his brain should be, there was little more than a sack of fluid.

The young Tampa couple decided they didn't want anything less than a perfect baby and dropped the adoption. Baby John Doe was taken to the Hillsborough County Association for Retarded Children and placed into a special group for handicapped kids in need of special medical care.

And that's where Frank and Donna Kaas came into the picture.

Though the couple already had two foster children and several of their own, they soon would agree to take on one more.

"We went to see him at the hospital and right away I fell in love with him," Donna said. "I picked him up and held him in my arms and it was just as if he was meant to be mine."

Frank and Donna took him home. They gave him a new family and a new name — David.

"I asked God to just let him live long enough for us to adopt him," Donna said. "I wanted him to have a name — something that would be his own."

Well, God answered Donna's plea and David became their very own. When the adoption was approved, the whole Kaas family appeared in court. It was a heartwarming occasion.

"Even the judge was in tears," Donna recalled.

The days, weeks and months that followed were not easy for the Kaas family. Caring for David's special needs was difficult and expensive. Their task was made even harder when Frank lost his job.

Somehow, Frank and Donna managed to carry on. They would allow nothing on earth to scar the love they showered on their little baby.

"He was so beautiful," Donna said. "I would pick him up and his heart murmur would come alive and his eyes would open and he would whatever he could. We would take him to the beach and let him feel the warm sand. We even took him to the circus. When I realized he would never know the rain, I took him out for a minute in a light shower."

Little David surprised doctors who said he wouldn't live more than six months. A few weeks ago, at the age of 3, he closed his eyes in peaceful slumber and didn't wake up.

Today, in a cemetery near Tallahassee, in a tiny grave warmed by the sun by day and dusted with starlight by night, little David sleeps his eternal sleep near the resting place of Donna's grandparents and relatives.

And so, even in death, the Farmer stung to death by angry swarm of honey bees

A 60-year-old Argentine peasant went to his grave in the most agonizing way imaginable — he was stung to death by an enormous swarm of honey bees!

When a search party of neighbors found Jose Bejar's body in a forest near San Salvador, it was still covered with a thick, living blanket of angry bees.

The neighbors stared in utter disbelief when they detected a slight but steady movement in Bejar's body. Could it be possible that he was still alive under that shroud of stinging death?

The grisly tableau horribly apparent when the searchers realized that the bees, which must have numbered in the millions, were covering their victim's corpse across the ground.

"It was an appalling sight," Bejar's uncle, Ramon Murillo, said. "The sheer number of bees was actually making the body move as though it still had life."

The police report said Bejar was found about 300 feet from a tree supporting what was described as "a beehive of monstrous proportions."

"The hive was only nine feet above the ground," Murillo said. "But it was three feet around and rose at least 20 feet up into the tree. There must be millions of bees inside. The rains they broke only thing we can think of is that Jose tried to smoke out the bees so that he could collect the honey. But the smoke only angered the bees up back and they swarmed all over him."

THOUSANDS of honey bees like this covered the body.

Police used tear gas grenades to drive the bees from Bejar's corpse long enough for it to be recovered.

Top doc says exercise may be bad for your health

Take it easy — and live longer!

A leading researcher says that exercise may not help you live longer — in fact it may hasten your death.

Dr. Roger McCarter of the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio theorizes that humans are equipped to burn just so many calories in a lifetime. He says when that number of calories is burned the person dies.

The idea is that more exercise burns up calories it may actually speed up the aging process — depending upon the person.

It could mean that a person with a middle age spread is actually healthier and will live longer than a trim fitness fanatic of the same age.

SLOW down your aging process by plopping into a favorite chair and relaxing.

An escaped prisoner tried to fool the cops by stripping to his shorts and jumping into a nearby hotel swimming pool — but it didn't work.

Deputy J. Westerlund was patrolling motel tribes guarding Los Angeles police ran by the pool looking for him. "He went that way, officer," said Westerlund 37.

Westerlund, accused of rob-bery, was ordered from the pool and taken in jail.

"He might have gotten away with it if he had swapped in the summertime," said a police officer.

"He was the only one in the pool."

The temperature at the time was about 48 degrees.

murder charge for gal who killed her lover

AIDS stabber set free!

By JOE BERGER

Sobbing secretary Sonja Jutle was acquitted of murder after telling a jury she stabbed her boyfriend to death because he made love to her — even though he knew he was dying of AIDS!

"I was out of my mind with fear and rage that he would do such a thing to me," shapely Sonja, 29, testified in an Oslo, Norway, court.

'I killed him so he couldn't hurt me anymore,' she said

"I was thinking, 'You've killed me! I have a son and I'll never get to see him grown, and it's all because of ... I knew that I had to kill him ... you!'"

The blonde mom told police she and beau Bjorn Sandor had dated for nearly a year before doctors informed Bjorn he had the dread disease homosexually linked to homosexuality.

"He came to me with tears in his eyes and told me he had AIDS and told me all about his gay lover," Sonja said. "I was hurt and confused and so very sad for him, but I told him I couldn't see him anymore because I have a little boy to care for and I wouldn't take any chances."

The distraught divorcee said she and Bjorn, 28, sat and talked for hours in his apartment — and finished off four bottles of champagne.

"I sat across the room from him because I was so afraid," she said.

"But I couldn't just leave him there alone because he was very upset. Finally I drank too much and went to sleep on his couch."

Red-eyed Sonja told the jury she woke up sometime later that night and found her sick stranger lying beside her on the sofa.

"He was asleep and I knew he had," she said.

"I was terrified. I started screaming at him that he had killed me and he said he would make love to me again if he wanted to.

"I thought he was going to try to have sex with me again, so I ran into the kitchen and got the biggest knife I could find.

"Then I started stabbing him with it, over and over again, so he couldn't hurt me anymore."

Sonja maintained she had killed Bjorn in self-defense and a sympathetic jury set her free.

Legal experts said it was the first time that the fear of attack by an AIDS sufferer was used as a defense in a murder trial anywhere in the world.

Doctors say there is no sign the shaken lady actually contracted the AIDS virus from her late lover.

Travel agents want to ban bellyaching tourists

Travel agents are thinking of blacklisting finicky tourists who bellyache and complain about silly stuff during trips.

One British tourist got the travel agent miffed to the max by complaining that there were mouse droppings on the bread roll he got in an eatery in Crete. Turned out the "droppings" were really currant seeds.

A gal who went to Greece ended up complaining to her travel agent because they put squid, a national delicacy, in her salad.

Then there was the visitor to Switzerland who was unhappy because there was snow at the ski resort.

Harry Chandler of an Anaheim travel agency keeps a list of 100 crybaby customers he says refuses to serve.

"We need a national list," said Chandler.

Hero snaps out of death trance after 15 years

Dumbfounded David King sat up in his hospital bed and asked a nurse what he was doing there — after lying semiconscious and silent for 15 years.

"It's like having someone come back from the grave," said his brother, Junior.

King, 37, suffered brain damage in 1973 when he saved his fiancee from drowning and nearly drowned himself in St. John's, Newfoundland.

Except for brief periods of improvement, the Canadian has been in a trance-like state ever since. His fiancee faithfully stayed by his side for two years, but eventually married someone else.

Help tosses dirty dishes out window

For years, the kitchen staff of a swank English riverfront restaurant had an easy way to wash the dirty dishes and silverware — they just threw them out the window and into the water below!

But their outrageous secret came to light when police frogmen found the 30-year accumulation scattered on the riverbed when they held a training exercise in the waters fronting the swanky Royal Victoria Hotel in Sheffield.

"The police found more than 50 complete place settings scattered on the river's bottom," an embarrassed hotel official said.

LIFE AND DEATH DRAMA AT SEA

A police cadet dives toward the icy waters of Hempstead Bay, on Brooklyn, to rescue a deranged woman who'd splashed into the bay and nearly drowned. Divers dropped from a helicopter to reach the woman, who smiled through the entire ordeal. She was taken to a hospital and will undergo psychiatric testing, police said.

Tragedy of the ballerina beauty

Beautiful ballerina Janet French danced the Dying Swan in performances of the famous Tchaikovsky ballet Swan Lake, delighting audiences for 10 years.

This year she played the part for real — when she carefully planned and carried out her own suicide.

The slender brunette dancer was found in her London home dead from an overdose of sleeping pills.

Friends say the star was obsessed with her weight and was tormented by fears she'd become too heavy to dance.

"Ballerinas are supposed about three inches — for it is with their bodies that they speak," declared heartbroken friend Christopher Hobbs, director of the Northern Ballet Company where Janet was a top dancer.

At inquest, Janet, 27, suffered from anorexia nervosa, a severe eating disorder. No matter how thin she was, she always felt she should lose more weight.

Finally she starved herself so much that she became too weak to dance.

Friends and family became so concerned about her that

But even the cancers of doctors and nurses were enough to save the failing star.

In early December she checked out of the hospital for a day.

That night she returned to the hospital ward — with a bottle of sleeping pills hidden in her purse.

Hours later she was found by the hospital staff — but it was too late to save her.

The dying ballerina requested an open coffin so her damaged body could be seen.

Her funeral was held at St. Paul's Church, Knightsbridge, London, on December 20.

Driver unhurt when truck is hit — by a flying barn

Pickup truck driver Robert McCarry was rolling along a highway near San Antonio — when he was hit by a barn!

"I saw it coming and tried to outrun it, but I just couldn't do it," said Mr. McCarry.

The cow had been tipped off a barn and went smashing toward McCarry as he drove along the highway.

It was about 20 feet away and flying right at the driver's side window. "I hit the gas and ducked down as far as I could, but the cow came around in the road three times," said McCarry.

After the horrible crash, Mr. McCarry was on the way to his car at an automobile repair shop when the twister buried the roof of him.

"Jeep, Ahoy!! [illegible] had been driving through the left front tire and was jammed into the truck's engine.

"The whole left side of the truck was totaled. That cow really brought me," said McCarry.

"I'm just lucky it hit the tire and didn't come through the door. I'm still shook up."

McCarry was on the way to his car at an automobile repair shop when the twister buried the roof of him.

Outraged actress claims . . .

My on-screen loverboy went too far!

A steamy love scene became a real-life horror for Italian film beauty Raffaella Rossellini, who claims her passionate costar "went all the way" — and actually raped her while the cameras rolled!

"The cameras were humming away as he beat me, rolled me over on my back and raped me," the raven-haired actress said of handsome actor Daniel Ezralow.

"The crew gaped as Daniel pulled down my flimsy gown and dragged me into a pond," she said. "And in the water, he went all the way."

The scene was filmed on the set of The Witches Black Sabbath, a fright-flick being shot in Rome.

In the film's most torrid moment, the cameras zoomed in as Daniel's clothes were torn off by a coven of frenzied witches dancing near a small pond. Daniel and Raffaella, the chief witch, wrestled wildly, pushing, beating, kissing and "possessing each other" until they rolled into the pond. Raffaella, whose late father Roberto was Ingrid Bergman's current lover, claims that's where Daniel "stopped play-acting."

Raffaella emerged from the pond and screamed, "He just raped me!" A Rome magistrate has ordered a full investigation of the incident.

Masher makes a big mistake

A welder tried to sexually molest a strapping blonde he met in an alley — and found out to his surprise that the victim was a man dressed as a woman, cops say!

Stephen Flockton, 22, of Exeter, England, asked his victim for a kiss and when the curvy blonde refused, dragged her kicking and screaming into a graveyard, cops say.

"The only thing which prevents this case being an actual indecent assault on a woman is that the victim was in fact, a man," said prosecutor Martin Edmunds. The blonde, Ian Hollingshead, appeared in court in a skirt and blouse. He said he tried to fight off the sex attack but couldn't.

Ian had dressed as a woman for eight years in preparation for a sex change operation.

Flockton was charged with attempted indecent assault and causing actual bodily harm. He pleaded innocent and is now on trial.

Blonde beauty he attacked was a wig-wearing guy, say cops

bull chews through aluminum like it's butter

Mutt eats mobile home!

"Oh my God, he ate my trailer. He ate right through the aluminum siding, the insulation, right down to the bare wall."

That was the reaction of dumbfounded Debbie Bair after a neighbor's pit bulling took a 4-by-8-foot bite out of her trailer to get at her year-old Chihuahua.

"I couldn't believe a dog could do that much damage, even a pit bull," she said.

"There were teeth marks in the wall where he tried to chew his way in."

After pet snack, Tiffany, shown at left clung to her trainer before the frightened attack.

Bair said her daughter Tiffany was playing on the front steps of the tiny trailer when Logan, the neighborhood pit bull terrier, broke away from his trainer and attacked the frightened little dog.

"Tiffany must have been terrified," she said. "I'm just glad nothing bad happened. I'm just going through her apron."

Bair said her daughter weren't at home at the time, so no one knows how long the two-and-a-half-year-old pit bull tried to get his way inside the trailer and get to

Scientist unlocks secret of time travel & is [redacted] frozen!

Icy blast from the past!

By BEATRICE DEXTER

A doctor of physics who claimed he had discovered an open door to another dimension has been found frozen to death — in the 98-degree heat of a South American summer.

And his scientific colleagues believe their friend may have opened a gateway to a glacial age and been killed by an icy blast from the past.

Dr Hector Tornado, the 37-year-old victim, was fellow professors in Buenos Aires Argentina, that he had discovered the key to leaping forward or backward in time. But no one took him seriously until his tragic death last month.

"He like this then opened a door into time, the fourth dimension, and caught a blast of frigid air that froze him immediately," said a friend of the professor, Dr. Jesus Rivera y Casas. "I don't believe he even had time to scream.

"And with his death we have lost all knowledge of his great discovery. He left no notes, no research, nothing."

Authorities discovered the solidly frozen body of a man lying on a quiet suburb but for from Dr Tornado's home. Local papers fastened upon the police efforts to identify the victim and subsequent interviews with friends of the dead man.

"If the physicist had moved back in time to the ice age when temperatures hovered at 50 degrees below zero — or forward in time to some future age when the Earth has cooled and died — he might have been killed by cold the moment he moved through time. That would explain the mystery. It's the only answer that seems possible."

Colleagues said they could find no clues to Tornado's breakthrough in his laboratory or in his home. They concluded, however, that he may have traveled in time before his last, deadly private experiment.

"We found seedlings of plants which flourished 250 million years ago — plants which long ago became coal," said Dr. Rivera y Casas. "We also found strange devices made of metals currently unknown on Earth. We think they might be tools used by visitors from another time — something yet to be discovered."

Dr. Tornado's colleagues claim he was among the greatest scientists in history. All of his brilliant and [illegible] have been lost, they said.

"It's a terrible tragedy to think my original work has been lost," said Dr. Rivera y Casas.

Suicide man saved once but dies in try No. 2

A passerby found Patrick O'Brien hanging around the park at the end of a rope tied to a tree limb for the second time in a week — only this time he was dead.

A week earlier, Randy Provenza was strolling through the same park in San Mateo, Calif., when he heard a voice say:

"Hey, gimme a hand please. I'm up here on the tree."

O'Brien, 40, was hanging by his hands from the tree limb with one end of a rope tied to the limb and a noose around his neck.

"He had kicked over a small ladder, but he had second thoughts at the last minute and grabbed the limb with both hands," said Police Sgt. Bob Derr.

Provenza helped O'Brien down and offered to buy O'Brien a cup of coffee.

But O'Brien refused and the two men went their separate ways.

A week later to the day, another passerby found O'Brien hanging from a tree.

O'Brien, who was apparently depressed over his marital problems, was dead on arrival at a nearby hospital.

Smashing night

Kathleen Doepkin had a shocking night when her parked car and her house were hit by cars skidding off an icy parking lot.

"I can laugh about it now, but I wasn't laughing last night," said the Lacombe, N.H., woman.

She said motorists taking a short cut across the parking lot crashed into her car twice — and slammed into her house twice. One of the motorists hit the same.

"The three who stopped are all insured by the same company," she said. "They are going to fix them when they get this done."

Expert advice . . .
Don't let ghosts spook you!

Ghosts and phantoms aren't the evil demons of the netherworld they're cracked up to be — most are just pathetic souls who have lost their way.

That's the troubling and reassuring belief of Arthur Myers, author of The Ghostly Register, after interviewing more than 200 people who have witnessed apparitions from the other side. "Some of my interviewees seemed off their rockers, although they've reported mysterious sounds, mysterious smells, moving objects and the touch of unseen hands," Myers said.

Myers' book describes 64 haunted houses, restaurants, hotels, theaters and ships, including a yacht owned by John Wayne.

The Duke's ghost, all decked out in his navy-blue garb, has been seen wandering the decks of the sleek yacht.

Boy is killed by tombstone!

Little Ryan Varga was gleefully playing hide-and-seek with his sister in a cemetery when a 600-pound tombstone toppled off its pedestal — and crushed the lad to death!

Ryan, 2, and his 4-year-old sister were playing while their parents were visiting Parkview Cemetery in Schenectady, N.Y.

The boy suffered massive head injuries when the 75-year-old tombstone fell, apparently from age weathering and a heaving of the ground from frost.

Ryan, whose parents live in New Brunswick, N.J., was pronounced dead on arrival at a nearby hospital.

Couple's dream house sits on arsenic mine

Norman Byrne and his wife Alicia bought a dream home last month — and it nearly killed the pair

The Catskill, N.Y. couple started feeling sick not long after moving to their new home.

Doctors diagnosed arsenic poisoning and found their water contained more than 200 times the safe limit.

Now, all three children, who first lived in the house, have to be hospitalized.

Byrne said he did not realize he suffered from symptoms of arsenic poisoning shortly after moving into their house. But they had no idea what was troubling them.

When they did not improve after several weeks, they went to a doctor who also concluded that the nausea, dizziness and headaches they suffered from were caused by the flu.

But when the symptoms continued and worsened, doctors

'A TV show saved my life'

Donald Sexton was on his deathbed and didn't even know it until he heard his symptoms described on a television doctor show!

The 61 year-old man immediately rushed to an emergency room in Chester, England and was diagnosed by docs as having deadly thrombosis, which could have killed him within hours.

"It was all a bit surreal watching TV and having them describe my own symptoms," said Sexton, who works in a nuclear power plant.

"I thought I had better do something about it."

Sexton was watching the popular British series, Casualty, when a patient on the show complained about leg and chest pains and breathlessness.

These are symptoms of thrombosis, a potentially-fatal condition caused by clots in the blood. Sexton's doctor promptly took steps to eliminate the danger.

Mrs. Sexton's wife Judy, 58, credits the TV show with saving her husband's life.

"We dread to think what would have happened if he hadn't seen Casualty," she said. "We're very grateful to the people who made the show."

Sexton himself added: "Some of the nurses in the hospital told me the way the symptoms were described was very accurate. It was not the second time I watched the show. Now I think I'll watch every week."

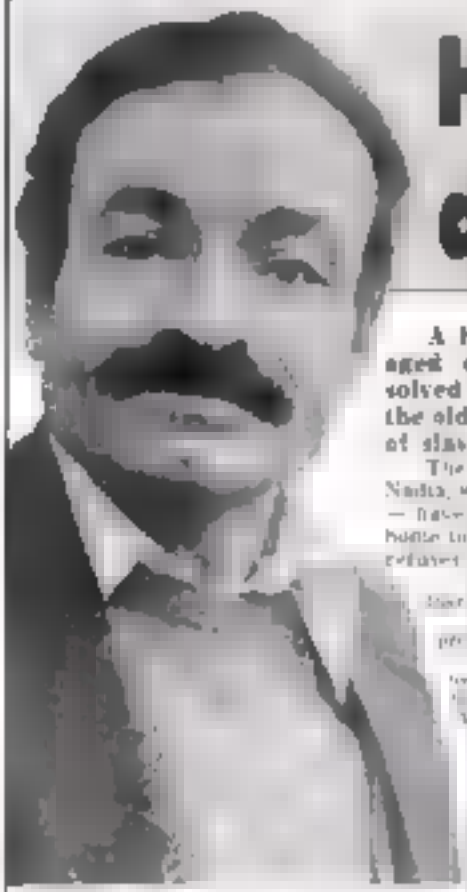
Hard-hearted [redacted] dad sells daughters into slavery!



STRODURN Muslem says he had to sell girls about fucking his young daughters

By SUSAN JAMISON

A hard-hearted dad who feared his teenaged daughters were headed for trouble, solved the problem by sending them back to the old country — and selling them into a life of slavery!

The two young girls — Zana, who was 15, and Nadia, who was 14 at the time they returned to Yemen — have begged their father repeatedly to bring them home to Birmingham, England. But the stubborn man refuses to help them return.

[redacted] and Mahmud Mahfouz, 36, the father of the two girls. I do not feel any guilt. If I had stayed here, they would have become prostitutes.

Mahfouz bristled at his daughters' letters that he was sending them to a new world of sex and immorality. The girls had been sent to Birmingham's conservative Arab community [redacted] to learn the ways of Islam. They were delighted with the trip.

But their father had made it clear he wanted them to marry Yemeni men and return to Yemen. The girls had been told by Mahfouz that they would be married to cousins [redacted] the day they arrived in Yemen. When they protested, Mahfouz threatened to send them back to Birmingham in disgrace. Desperate, they wrote letters to friends in England begging for help.

Boy's mom stored boxes at home to earn some extra money

By ROSE CRADY

A little boy's game of pretend turned into a tragic drama of horror when he was crushed to death — under a mountain of mail-order catalogs!

Tot crushed to death by mail-order catalogs!

By the time his mom found him buried under the heavy catalogs, 2-year-old [redacted] Wallace had stopped breathing.

A neighbor's efforts to revive him with CPR failed and the youngster was pronounced dead on arrival at a London hospital.

Grief stricken 25-year-old Judy Wallace, who stored the catalogs in her home for a mail-order firm to make extra money, blames herself for little Ryan's death. "We didn't really need the money," she said through her tears. "I don't care about the money. I will never feel the guilt. I'm absolutely shattered. I only took on the job because I could do it at home and still look after Ryan and my two daughters."

The boy had tipped over the mini-mountain of books and was tottering around his playroom in a game of pretend when he apparently stumbled against the cardboard stack and fell.

The 34-pound tower crashed down on the tot like a load of bricks, burying him.

His mom was watching TV in another room at the time. The 25-year-old didn't realize anything was wrong until she finally glanced over and saw what had happened. Only then did she scream for help.

The mother of two was rushed to the nearby London Memorial Hospital, but Ryan was pronounced dead on arrival.

Coroner Dr. Montague Levine said, "I wouldn't want Ryan's parents to feel the terrible guilt that they are directly responsible.

The youngster's death was ruled an accident.

Suspect was no match for steel

Authorities said an arson suspect was caught red-handed — when she tried to set fire to the fire department's undercover surveillance van.

Officials in Hagerstown, Wash., said 25-year-old Tammie Dunlap was arrested when she ignited the hem of a bedsheet she had been using to keep her under-ventilators and tried to set fire to the carpet.

Agt. John Sutton said the trouble was started when the sentence after authorities received a tip about 15 fires set in her neighborhood during a three-week period.

Ear-y jewelry gets artist in hot water

By JOE SIEGEL

Shocked cops raided a London art gallery and confiscated a pair of spine-chilling pendant earrings — made from tiny human fetuses!

But outraged Canadian artist Rick Gibson said he doesn't see what all the fuss is about — and he's planning to sue to get his gruesome jewelry back.

Shocked cops confiscate his human-fetus earrings

"The police have no right to come in and take away a man's work simply because they may find it distasteful," said riled-up Rick, 34.

"These earrings are very valuable and I definitely want them returned."

Disguised police barged in and whisked away the grisly pendants just minutes after they went on display at the Young Unknowns Gallery in London.

And when the cops grilled Gibson, they were astounded to learn that he acquired the 8-week-old fetuses by placing an ad on a gallery window and pay for legally preserved human limbs and fetuses.

"The oddball artist sent us this statement by a man who claimed to be a lecturer in anatomy.

"He had two small fetuses which were all dried up after being treated with some sort of preservative," Gibson told reporters.

"He said they had come from the laboratory where he worked but were no longer of any use and I could have them. I had to put them in a chemical solution to restore them shape and had them freeze-dried. Then I just screwed hooks into them, and now they look like extremely hardly carved talon wood."

Gibson says he's confident he'll prevail.

"Three years ago I had an exhibition and showed a number of items, including a human uterus that had been freeze-dried," Gibson said.

Toddler survives 3 weeks on chips & bottled water in house with dead parents

Tiny tot Linda Carr miraculously survived for three weeks alone in a house with her dead parents and sister — eating potato chips and drinking water from a toilet.

By JACK ALEXANDER

The frightened 17-month-old youngster was found huddled with the family dog in a bathroom after a relative smelled an obnoxious odor and called cops.

Sprawled on the living room floor were the bodies of her mother, Angela Carr, 17, and stepfather, Matthew Madl 20. Both had been shot in the head.

"We believe that Madl shot his wife and turned the gun on himself," said Kansas City, Kans., Police Lt. Ken Miller.

Linda's 3-month-old infant sister, Amber, was in a bedroom. An autopsy determined she died of dehydration.

Police believe that Linda lived through the horrifying ordeal on nothing but potato chips that were scattered throughout the small, one-story home.

No other food was found in the kitchen.

The little girl probably watched her pet Doberman quencher drink out of the toilet bowl and did the same thing, said Miller.

"I'm not sure she's old enough to know to stand on the toilet and drink from the bathroom faucet," said Miller. "The doctors say the water from the toilet bowl wouldn't have been toxic."

After being examined and released up at Bethany Medical Center, Linda was released to state social workers who will place her up in foster home or with relatives.

Friends and neighbors said Madl was desperate over financial problems. He was trying to support his family on $3.65 an hour as a 30-hour a week cook.

A neighbor said he was concerned about Linda on November 6 by the sound of gunshots from the house. He didn't call cops because "in this neighborhood you hear things like that all the time." The relative called police November 27.

"It baffles the mind how those people were not missed for several weeks, especially over the Thanksgiving holiday," said Miller.

Gold-plated phony posed as Greek tycoon's sister

A 44-year-old woman was sentenced to seven years behind bars on charges stemming from a wacky scam in which she passed herself off as Aristotle Onassis' sister.

Rowena Powell, a plump, orange-haired artist convinced victims that she was a globe-trotting heiress by writing out a $1 million check to get the ball rolling, cops said.

But when the charade was over, the hapless impostor pleaded guilty in Hackensack, N.J., to charges of issuing a bad check, theft by deception and attempted theft by deception.

New Jersey businessman Leonard Lautenberger said Rowena Powell introduced herself as Christina Onassis when they met at a fine-jewelry trade show in New York City.

Onassis' daughter is named Christina, but he did not have a sister by that name.

Lautenberger, a film executive, said Miss Powell told him she wanted to have a movie made about her late brother "to set the record straight about him."

According to Lautenberger, the Onassis impostor claimed to be short on cash while she waited for $5 million to be shipped to her from Switzerland.

Lautenberger shelled out $700 to pay for her meals and hotel rooms in the meantime.

Three days after they met, Miss Powell handed Lautenberger a check for $1 million.

"I was shocked," the jaw-dropper said. "She said she'd set up trusts for my two children, pay off my mortgage and get this movie started."

By the time Lautenberger discovered the check was worthless, the impostor had checked out of her hotel room.

Miss Powell was arrested several days later after she tried to use Lautenberger's American Express card number to book an airline ticket to Dallas.

Authorities said Miss Powell has a long criminal record dating back to 1948, when she posed as a prostitute.

Given then she has pretended to be a Rockefeller, an heiress to the Woolworth fortune and various other personalities.

"It was an acting ability I had," said Miss Powell. "I've always had it. I've had a desire to be an actress all my life. I've always been able to step into the part so fast."

Miss Powell's roles haven't won her an Oscar, but they have resulted in 88 arrests, 13 convictions and a total of 11 years behind bars.

Their eyes met across a crowded courtroom — & it was love at first sight!

The killer takes a bride!

By DICK DONOVAN

Their eyes met across a crowded courtroom and a few months later Lyn Fallon and Kevin Gee were married — in the prison cell where he is serving a life term for murder!

The newlyweds then spent two hours together in a private room in England's Gartree Prison while an armed guard watched their every move through a glass door.

Couple weds behind bars — but their honeymoon'll have to wait until 1997

LYN FALLON holds Kevin's love letters.

Pretty 21-year-old Lyn first saw 31-year-old Kevin in the Liverpool courtroom where he was being tried for the strangulation murder of a prostitute.

"When I first set eyes on Kevin, I felt as if someone had just hit me with a brick," Lyn said. "I couldn't keep my eyes off him.

"He stared back, puzzled. He was trying to listen to the testimony, but soon we were gazing into each other's eyes. The judge noticed and looked disapprovingly over his glasses. But I didn't care.

"I know it sounds crazy, but it was love at first sight across a crowded courtroom. I knew immediately he was the only man for me."

KEVIN GEE, left, was being tried for murder when he met Lyn. He was later convicted and sent to prison.

Kevin was convicted and given a life term. When he was transferred to Gartree, Lyn quit her job and moved to Leicester to be near him. Then, over the next few months, Lyn visited Kevin as often as she could. The lovesick pair exchanged hundreds of letters and, finally, Kevin popped the question. "Will you marry me?" he asked.

"Why not?" Lyn replied.

The double-ring ceremony was held in Kevin's prison cell. There was even a wedding cake baked by a prison guard. Then they were allowed their two hours together in the room with the glass door.

"It bothers me that the physical side of our relationship will have to wait," Lyn sighed. "But really there's nothing I can do about that. We'll just have to make do on kisses and cuddles on visits."

The earliest Kevin could be released is 1997.

Glamor granny cons 28 young love-sick guys out of $140G

Glamorous grandmother Helga Stutz conned at least 28 young men out of an estimated $140,000 by promising to marry them, say newspapers.

The woman, believed to be in her late 60s, wooed the men and won their hearts, then dipped into their bank accounts and absconded with a fortune in cash.

Incredibly, 26 of the victims said they still would marry the woman if given the chance. One wasn't sure. And one vowed to kill her on sight.

"She must be one hell of a charmer," police Capt. Werner Kreis told reporters in Aachen, West Germany. "All the victims are successful, attractive men in their late 30s or 40s."

Although the woman hasn't broken any laws, she stands to be arrested on the strength of a warrant issued after Volker Scharke, 29, filed a complaint with the Aachen police. The spurned bank exec alleges that Miss Stutz cheated him out of $23,000 — and stole his Mercedes Benz!

"If I get my hands on that witch I'll kill her," said Scharke, who met the woman in November and proposed two weeks later. "She told me she needed to borrow the money to help a sister pay some medical bills. I trusted her with my life savings and she took me for every cent."

. . . and most of them would still marry her

Miss Stutz allegedly took Michael Rosscherter, 36, for $5,000.

But he forgives her — and says his proposal of marriage is still good.

"Helga is one-in-a-million," said Rosscherter, who owns a construction company in Aachen. "She has long blonde hair and a gorgeous figure. I know she's way up in her 60s, but she doesn't look a day over 50.

"I can't put my finger on what makes her so special. I guess it's the way she makes a man feel. When you're with her you think you're the most important guy in the world."

Of the 28 young men who reported losing money to Miss Stutz after news of the arrest warrant made the papers, all but Rosscherter said they'd welcome the woman back with open arms.

"I doubt they will ever see her again," said Capt. Kreis.

'The Church is recognizing that man is not the only intelligent being in the universe'

By RON LANIT

The Vatican is training a bold new breed of missionary to spread the gospel — in outer space!

"Without a doubt this is the most staggering development in the history of organized religion," theology professor Rudolph Koller told reporters in Salzburg, Austria.

"For the first time a major church is recognizing that men are not the only intelligent beings in the universe.

"Not only that, it is prepared to convert extraterrestrials to a religious system that is almost certainly alien to their own."

News that the Roman Catholic Church has begun to train priests for alien contact came to light in a brief but revealing press release issued by the Vatican.

The statement noted that a special UFO section has been established at the Vatican University's Affonsian Academy to shape the "attitudes, approaches and techniques" missionaries will need to Christianize aliens after contact is made. It went on to say this strange and historic decision was made after Vatican theologians realized future developments would make the training of space missionaries of prime importance to the Church."

Father Pierre Sirel, a Vatican theologian, flatly stated that the futuristic training program is an idea whose time has come.

"The existence of alien races in outer space is hardly certain," he said. "But we can neither ignore space exploration nor the possibility of meeting other living creatures."

UFO experts were divided in their opinions of the Vatican's space-great initiative.

Her house was on fire but she didn't want to disturb firemen

Elderly widow Anne Wilde was so polite, she risked her life battling a dangerous early morning blaze in her home rather than call for help — and wake up the local firemen.

Finally, the blaze in her big double bed became too much for the 80-year-old woman from Seaton, England, and she raised the alarm at last.

"She could have died in that bedroom," said Vivian Peter, an officer in the local volunteer fire brigade.

Apparently, something went wrong with her electric blanket and it sparked the blaze in her bed.

Rather than call for help, the widow decided not to arouse her local fire department in early in the morning.

"I didn't want to disturb anybody," she explained later. "It was too early in the morning. I know the lads are part-timers and they need their sleep like of the Rome-based group Citizens for Non-Intervention in Alien Affairs, was especially harsh in his criticism of the plan.

"Missionaries are among the most hated foreigners in the Third World," he said. "What makes the Catholics think that extraterrestrials are going to like them any better?

"These missionaries could set back our relations with aliens for years."

Theodore Rimmel, the West German psychologist, couldn't have disagreed more. "By converting aliens to Christianity we would immediately establish a common ground," he said.

"What better way to foster a spirit of cooperation and mutual respect than to offer them love and immortality through our own living God?"

Red-faced Romeo is carted away by furniture movers

Debt collectors removing a large, free-standing closet from a woman's apartment were stunned when they heard a yelp come from the piece — then a naked man jumped out and ran off.

"I don't think he'll be back in a hurry," chuckled 63-year-old Josef Rafalski, of West Berlin, West Germany.

"There was this startled yell from inside when we picked up the wardrobe to put it in our van. This man popped out, grabbed his clothes and ran away."

The man turned out to be the frightened lover of the woman who owned the apartment, according to the movers. He had hidden himself inside the closet thinking his girlfriend's husband was at the door.

He and the woman, a young divorcee, were apparently engaged in an afternoon love romp when the collectors movers arrived.

According to one of the movers, the woman objected when the men told her they were there to cart off her possessions.

But she really objected when the first piece of furniture they grabbed was the wardrobe in her bedroom.

The woman tried to block their path and had to be held at bay by one of the movers.

But the real laugh came when the men were in the street and about to hft the $600 piece into their truck. Out

The Royal Road To Riches

Dear Friend,

My name is John Wright. You see long ago I was flat broke. I was $37,000 in debt. The bank repossessed my car because I couldn't keep up with the payments. And one day the landlord gave me an eviction notice because I hadn't paid the rent for three months. So we had to move out. My family and I stayed at my cousin's place for the last of our cash until I could manage to get another apartment. This was very embarrassing.

Things have changed now. I own four homes in Southern California. The one I'm living in now is Beverly Hills, a nice place this one million dollar. I own several cars, among them a brand new Mercedes and a brand new Cadillac. Right now, I have a $1 million dollar line of credit with the banks and have no obligations or deposits of $100,000 each in the bank in Beverly Hills.

Best of all, I have more to have fun. To be me. To do what I want. I work about 4 hours a day, the rest of the day I do things that please me. Some days I go canoeing and sailing — canoeing. Other days, I play racquetball or cycle. Sometimes, though, I just lie and watch the sun sink a good book. I love to take long vacations. I just got back from a two week vacation here ... Maui, Hawaii.

I'm not really trying to impress you with my wealth. All I'm trying to do here is to prove to you that it wasn't because of that lucky card I was later rewarded to find that day. I self myself have gone all way to overcome my money problems. I used bad credit and debt and financial history. Why I went what would have happened to my family and me.

Knowing about the secret changed my life completely. It brought me wealth, abundance and more happiness of all — peace of mind. The secret will change your life, too! It will give you everything you need and will solve all your money problems. Of course you don't have to take my word for it. You can try it for yourself. To see that you can do the same, I'm willing to give you $20,00 in cash. I'm giving my address at the bottom of this page! I repeat $20.00, I put my address. And you will prove to be one-of-the-amazing money users will work for you, too!

Why, you may ask, am I willing to share this secret with you? To make money? Hardly. First, I already have all the money and possessions I'll ever need. Second, my secret does not involve any sort of competition whatsoever. Third, sharing a great secret with you helps others realize a golden opportunity and go on a journey.

This secret is incredibly simple. Anyone can use it. You can get started with practically no money at all and the risk is almost zero. You don't need special training or even a high school education. It doesn't matter how young or old you are and it will work for you at home or even while you are on vacation.

If you can follow simple instructions you can get started in a single afternoon and in a possible to have considerable money in your hands the very next morning. This is a very safe way to get more cash. It is practically risk free. It is not a dangerous gamble. Everything you do this entirely both tested and you can get started for no money and most people spend for a night on the town.

One of the many things that you cannot also is that you are given a chance to start over. You don't need replacement or an office. It doesn't matter where you live either. You can use the secret to make money if you live in a big city or with a farm or anywhere in between. A husband and wife team from New York used my secret, worked at home to save more time, and made $45,000 in one year.

The secret is simple. It would be hard to explain it in detail if you tried. You don't need a college degree or even a high school education. All you need is a little common sense and the ability to follow simple, easy step-by-step instructions. I personally know a man from Virginia who used the secret and made $1 million in just 7 years.
